“Can’t you drive faster,
Mom?” asked
River Bogglesby.

“Yes—faster, faster!”
said his sister, Ripple.
“We don’t want to be late!”

The Bogglesby family
grows vegetables and fruits
on their farm.

Every weekend they drive
to the Honeysuckle Hollow Farmer's Market with their
just-picked produce.

The kids love to trade fruits
and veggies for fresh-baked pies,
bread, eggs, cheese, jams,
and pastries.

“It’s okay. We have lots
of time,” said their parents,
Amy and Albert.

But suddenly, the kids saw
Liv and Skip Skyhopper
waving wildly to them.

“Can you help?”
Liv called. “Our airplane
has a flat tire!”

“Of course we’ll help!” Dad said, and soon, the airplane tire was fixed.

“I’m glad we helped, but I hope we’re not too late to get our treats at the market,” said Ripple, as they drove off.

Very soon, they noticed Humphrey Riverdipper on the side of the road, waving
his arms.

“Can you help?” he asked.
“My kite is in the tree,
and I can’t get it down!”

Won't stopping make us late?
River wondered.

But Mom said, “Of course
we’ll help!”

Soon, Humphrey had his
kite back.

“Mom, please drive faster,”
begged River, as the Bogglesbys
headed off again.

“Or we’ll miss the market!”

“Helping friends is more important than getting to market on time,” said Mom.

“All will be fine.”

Then, as they drove by Honeysuckle Hollow Pond,
they saw Howie and Cookie
Tippytail waving.

“Can you help?” asked
Howie. “Mom and Dad
are floating away without
any paddles!”

Won't stopping make us late? Ripple wondered.

But Dad said,
“Of course we’ll help!”

Soon, the Tippytail parents were safely back on dry land.

But just as River and Ripple
had worried...they got to the Farmer's Market
too late.

Everyone was gone!

“We have so many fruits and veggies,” Dad said. “Maybe
we can give more help?”

So, they drove to the city
and gave their produce to the food bank. It would be shared with anyone who needed it.

On the way home, the kids
agreed they liked helping others. But they also thought of the treats
they missed out on.

Then, “Oh, look!”
cried Ripple.

On their porch was a big gift basket and
a card from their
Farmer's Market friends.

*“Thanks for your good deeds today. Here are some of your favorite treats
to enjoy!”*

“Mom and Dad,” said River,
“you showed us that
helping friends is important
and told us all would be fine... ”

“...and you were right,”
said Ripple. “But everything
isn’t just fine...”

“It’s amazing!”
cried River and Ripple.

The Bogglesbys all laughed.
Indeed, it was one
of their best market
days ever!

Hoppin' Farmers Market® Truck

Lil' WOODzeez

Every weekend, Amy and Albert Bogglesby and their kids, River and Ripple, load up their red truck and drive straight to the Honeysuckle Hollow Farmer's Market. There, they trade their family's just-picked fruits and veggies for fresh-baked pies, bread, eggs, cheese, jams, and pastries. Yum!

But today, soon after heading off to market, the kids begin to worry that they'll be too late. What happens if you have to choose between helping friends— and getting treats?
